

Appreciate the Fog in Decision-Making

If only... decisions were choices made using certain information, without any time pressures, interpersonal conflict, or competing ideas and agenda. Great to dream! For significant decisions there is always a high degree of fog – the discomfort associated with not having the clarity we would like when it matters. Nevertheless the decisions still must be made.

Workshop Benefits

By taking this Workshop you will be able to:

- identify key contributors of fog when making decisions
- avoid ineffective strategies used to artificially create clarity
- apply sound strategies to reach good decisions
- Work with others in developing the information needed for decisions
